THE PAPER FOR ALL HACKNEY PEOPLE

Circulated to 108,000 homes and businesses in Hackney

Issue 238 23 August 2010

Party time

Members of carnival group People of Paradise strut their stuff in the sunshine

THOUSANDS converged on Hackney Downs Park after a colourful parade for the third Hackney One Carnival.

Residents, carnival groups, community arts organisations, musicians and dancers all enjoyed the blazing sunshine and party atmosphere on 8 August. There were also stage performances and a whole host of activities on offer in the park, including a workshop where residents could make their own carnival headdresses, face-painting, sports competitions, and food from across the world.

STAR STUDENTS

By Marcel Reinard

HACKNEY schools and colleges have been celebrating top A level grades, as record results were announced nationwide.

Some of the borough's young people equalled, or bettered, last year's results, with a number of students achieving the newly introduced A* grade.

Standout individual performances included Allum Bokhari of BSix College, E5, who achieved triple A* grades. The college described its results as continuing an 'excellent run' with a 100 per cent pass rate on 14 of BSix's A level courses.

Six students at Our Lady's Convent High School, N16, got A* grades, and 83 per cent received A-C passes.

Head teacher, Jane Grey, said: "We are very pleased that our hard-working students, supported by equally dedicated staff, have achieved such outstanding results."

It was only the second year that Clapton Girls' Technology College students sat A levels, but four students still achieved A*s.

Head Cheryl Day said: "The results are better than last year on every measure and I cannot praise the achievements of students highly enough."

Stoke Newington School and Sixth Form, N16, was also delighted with its results: 63 per cent gaining A-C grades and 94 per cent passing their A levels.

Head Annie Gammon, said: "We are delighted with our students results: their talent, potential and hard work is duly recognised by these excellent grades."

The 97 per cent pass rate at Hackney Community College (HCC), N1, was an increase of eight per cent on last year, with nine A-level subjects boasting a 100 per cent pass rate. Grades A-C were also up 13 per cent.

HCC Deputy Principal, Lois Fowler, said: "Our students have worked incredibly hard and we're dedicated to sustaining the steady improvement that we've worked for in recent years."

Speaking after the results were announced on 19 August, Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "I would like to congratulate all our young people who have worked hard to achieve such impressive grades, and to wish them further success as they move into the next stage of their lives, whether that involves training, higher education or employment."

Message from the Mayor

Securing our pupils' futures

I WOULD like to take this opportunity to congratulate all of our students who have received their A level results.

A student from Clapton Girls' Technology College studies her results

In due course there will be analysis and comparison of the overall performance within the borough, which appears to have improved again.

At this time, however, we should focus on the fact that for each individual their results represent the culmination of all the hard work that they have put in throughout their educational career but especially over the past two years.

I want to commend Hackney's students for all the efforts they have made and wish them well as they decide on the next steps they will take as they move into a new stage of their life – whether that involves further training, higher education or their first steps into employment. I'd also like to take this opportunity to wish our GCSE students all the best for their results which are due to be published on 24 August.

The Council has been working to create new school environments in which our children can reach their full potential. Having secured our Building Schools for the Future funding means that current and future generations of students will benefit from improved buildings and facilities in which to learn at all of our secondary schools.

However, education does not take place only in the classroom and during the summer we have been running a programme of activities for young (and not so young) residents to experience new activities and learn new skills while having fun. I hope that as many people as possible will take the opportunity to participate in some of the remaining events over the next few weeks.

'I locked myself away for months'

BSix College student Allum Bokhari (left) is off to Oxford to study history & politics

By Marcel Reinard

A NEW round of high achievers across the borough scored big on A-level results day.

Many excelled with the addition of the new A* grade, while others saw their options expand after receiving higher grades than predicted.

One of Hackney's standout stars was BSix College's Allum Bokhari. The 19-year-old achieved A*s in philosophy, history and politics, after astonishingly arriving at BSix with no qualifications and taking a combination of AS levels and GCSEs in his first year. Allum said: "I just locked myself away for months without really speaking to anyone. But I'm definitely celebrating now."

He now goes on to read history & politics at Oxford.

> "Once more, many of our students have exceeded expectations"

Alan Wood, Chief Executive of The Learning Trust, said: "Once more, many of our students have exceeded expectations. It fills me with an enormous sense of pride to say that today Hackney is, without doubt, one of the most exciting, inspirational and successful places in the country to learn, aspire and achieve."

At Stoke Newington School and Sixth Form College, Marouf Khan was dazed at getting higher than predicted results. He joined the clearing race in the hopes of attending a better university. "I've been on the phone with my teacher to try to see what's available," he gasped. "I'm not sure what to do, as it's all new to me."

Our Lady's Convent High School's Joanna Davies received A*, A, A in chemistry, physics and biology and secured her place to read veterinary medicine at Bristol University. "It feels great because I didn't have much success getting offers. When I received the offer from Bristol I knew how important it was to do well," she said.

Pawel Ladosz achieved A* A, A in maths, chemistry and physics, while studying at Hackney Community College. He said: "I've been really well supported while studying and everyone is so friendly. I'm so pleased with my results – I can't believe it." He will study Aerospace Engineering at Imperial College London.

Make photo history

By Miranda Yates

BECOME a part of Hackney's history by sending in photographs that capture the borough's changing landscape in the run-up to the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

Hackney Museum has joined up with experiential photography organisation Shoot Experience to create an exhibition of residents' inspirational snap shots.

Internationally renowned artist, Stephen Gill, much of whose work focuses on Hackney, will help pick the winning images to form the basis of the 'Capture Hackney' photography exhibition later this year.

Judges are looking for photos with real personality and a genuine sense of Hackney as it is today, in order to capture a moment in time and make future generations of viewers feel they are leaping right back to 2010.

The project is jointly funded by the Council and English Heritage.

Entry is free and prizes for the most creative pictures include cameras and other photographic equipment. Entrants must be aged 16-plus.

The closing date is 17 September. Photographers can find out if their work has been chosen for display at a launch night in the Reading Lane museum on 7 October.

After the exhibition, the pictures selected for the exhibition will be given to Hackney Archives and become a lasting legacy for future generations.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Rebecca Adlington with young swimmers at Clissold pool

Powering through the pools

DOUBLE Olympic gold medalist Rebecca Adlington came to Hackney to launch a new swimming scheme on 17 August.

The freestyle champion took the plunge with youngsters at Clissold Leisure Centre, N16, and urged more people to take up the sport. She said: "It's really important that children learn to swim and be comfortable in the pool from an early age. But it's never too late to learn."

She was promoting a scheme by British Gas which offers customers three free swimming sessions in local pools. The offer runs until 30 November and covers two adults and two children per visit.

In July, the Council announced free swimming for under-18s and over-60s is set to continue in the borough, despite Government plans to axe the grant to local authorities that funds part of the scheme. Legacy for the 2012 stadium

THE future of the Olympic Stadium took a step closer to being decided this month, when bids to lease the iconic building were opened.

The Olympic Park Legacy Company (OLPC) which owns the stadium has received over 100 expressions of interest from organisations wanting to take it over after the Games, including West Ham United Football Club.

Most proposed three main themes: a multi-use stadium containing athletics and commercial, health or education facilities; reduced seating; and a long lease.

The bidding process will last until 30 September. Margaret Ford, OPLC Chairman, said: "The Stadium is at the heart of the Olympic Park and securing the most appropriate solution is crucial to our long-term aspirations for the area."

Into bat on the Marshes

HACKNEY Marshes is set to become the home of cricket with new pitches, changing rooms and a pavilion created as part of a multi-million pound investment by the Council.

Five artificial cricket pitches are due to open on North Marsh next summer, with all the facilities available by 2012, thanks to funding secured from the England and Wales Cricket Board in partnership with Sport England.

State-of-the-art rugby pitches, Football Association-standard football pitches, and junior football pitches are also included in the plans. A new Hackney Marshes Centre will boast classrooms, a café, spectators' area and accessible changing rooms.

The legendary Loddiges family

By Sally England, Local Studies Librarian

TODAY Hackney Free and Parochial School stands in the place of a great tropical rainforest hothouse – the centrepiece of Loddiges' Nursery.

People came to see fascinating imported plants, such as azaleas, camellias, and wisteria.

Although familiar to gardeners today, they were then new and exotic.

One such visitor was Charles Darwin, who noted in September 1838 that he: "Saw in Loddiges' garden 1,279 varieties of roses!!! Proof of capability of variation."

It was wound down in the 1850s, as the taste for botanical plants declined.

There are also memorials to the family in Abney Park Cemetery, and the name lives on in Loddiges Street and Loddiges House on Frampton Park Estate.

Gardeners' world

By Danielle Beattie

A CELEBRATION of the borough's rich gardening history and heritage took place at St John at Hackney churchyard with a tribute to the Loddiges family.

They managed and developed the largest nursery and hothouse of its time in Hackney, supplying exotic seeds and plants from all over the world and influencing the design of many Victorian gardens.

To mark the contribution of this historic family to the borough, 60 residents held a big picnic and created paper flowers to decorate the Loddiges family tomb.

The event on 25 July also included a procession to St Augustine's Tower, where a story telling session was held, children were also invited to dress up in costumes from the Loddiges' era and to find out more about the tower.

> "I felt proud to help them learn a bit more about our amazing borough's heritage

Jools Voce (left), a performer with cabaret act, Underbling and Vow, took on the character of Georgina – a Victorian gardener and employee of the Loddiges – for the day, and got everyone involved in story telling and singing a special Loddiges song.

Jools said: "I loved doing the research for this role, seeing all the kids joining in was wonderful, and I felt proud to help them learn a bit more about our amazing borough's heritage."

Mum Fiona brought her daughter Alice, two, to the event. She said: "What a lovely afternoon. We both really enjoyed it. I didn't know anything about Hackney's botanical history before. The people running the activities were great."

Hackney Gardeners Remembered' was organised by staff from Hackney Museum and formed part of the Discover Hackney annual festival.

Voluntary and community groups can apply for funding from the Council until 22 September

Your funding bid

By Ruth Garland

VOLUNTARY and community groups in Hackney can now apply for a grant from a Council funding programme totalling nearly £2.5million.

Applications are invited for main grants of £7,000 to £50,000; small start-up grants for new projects of up to £7,000; and holiday play scheme grants up to £10,000.

The grants are offered across six themes: promoting work opportunities; raising educational achievement and aspirations; promoting health, well-being and independent living; helping to make Hackney safer; developing good neighbourhoods; and supporting environmental sustainability.

Ian Lewis, Director of Partnerships, said: "During difficult financial times: It's important that we work together to ensure the most vulnerable people in Hackney are not let down."

Last year, 230 organisations applied for the funding and 89 were successful. Applications worth a total of £5million were requested – twice the amount of money available.

Among 2010/11's successful applicants were Lubavitch Youth in Stamford Hill. The Charedi organisation, which offers activities including youth leadership training, received £40,000, plus £10,000 for its holiday programme.

Hackney City Farm, E2, received £30,000. One of the longest-running voluntary organisations in the borough, it provides learning and leisure activities based around eco-friendly food and farming.

An Viet Foundation aims to respond to the changing needs of the large Vietnamese community living in Hackney. It received £35,000.

Applicants have until 22 September to make a bid for funding in 2011/12. Hackney Council for Voluntary Service (HCVS) is offering a workshop with advice and guidance on how to apply, from 1-4pm, on 14 September.

New River by-election

FOLLOWING the death of Cllr Maureen Middleton in July, a by-election will be held in New River ward on Thursday, 16 September. Residents living in this ward will receive a polling card by Monday, 23 August, telling them where they can cast their vote.

There are five candidates: Jonathan Burke, Labour; Stuart Coggins, Green; Darren Fraser, independent; Benjamin Mathis, Lib Dem; and Benzion Papier, Conservative.

If you live in New River ward, carefully check the details on the green electoral registration form that was delivered to your home recently. If the details are not correct, make the necessary changes, if they are ok, just sign the form. In both cases, return the form to the Council by 1 September to be eligible to vote. For info call: 020 8356 3000; or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/3344

In tribute to Cllr Middleton, a book of remembrance will be open from 1 September for residents to view and contribute to at the Robin Redmond Resource Centre, Seven Sisters Road, N4.

Holding out for a hero

HACKNEY Homes is calling on residents to nominate staff who have gone the extra mile.

Residents can show their appreciation for gardeners, cleaners, maintenance workers, or any other staff member who has made a difference.

The Hackney Homes Heroes awards recognise employees who are extraordinary in a number of categories.

Nominations close on 30 September. Residents can pick up a nomination form from their local neighbourhood office, or download one at: www.hackneyhomes.org.uk

On stage for 'Breakout! 2010'

New take on Animal Farm

A CAST of 30 young actors gave a performance inspired by George Orwell's seminal novel as the final part of their summer youth programme.

New Kingshold Tenants and Residents' Association joined up with Hackney charity, Immediate Theatre, to present 'Breakout! 2010'. Loosely based on 'Animal Farm', it told the story of a group of idealistic animals who chase humans out in order to run a farm their way.

Aged between eight and 12, the performers were at the end of a week of fun theatre games, exercises and rehearsals intended to teach valuable communication skills, and help them gain confidence and make new friends. The project was also supported by the Council, Sanctuary Group, and the London Development Agency.

Be seen and heard

By Gracia Douglas

THE 32 candidates vying to become one of 20 elected members of Hackney Youth Parliament have been announced, and will soon be canvassing for votes in elections due to be held this October.

The parliament gives young people the chance to use their passion and energy to represent the views of their peers.

From 11 to 14 October, thousands of local 11 to 19-year-olds will flex their democratic muscles to elect members to represent Hackney's four neighbourhood areas – Homerton, North East, Shoreditch and Stoke Newington – on the borough-wide youth body.

The elections are the highlight of a series of events to mark Local Democracy Week, from 13 to 19 October, an annual campaign to connect young people with their local council. Voting will take place at secondary schools and selected youth clubs across the borough.

The successful candidates will be announced following a count at Hackney Town Hall on 15 October.

Anita Okopu, outgoing Secretary of Hackney Youth Parliament, said: "We've come a long way since we were elected in 2008. We've championed the voice of young people in Hackney and we're really proud of that.

"To everyone up for election, good luck, work hard and be proud of who you are."

THE borough's third annual carnival saw more than 8,000 residents and visitors lining the streets for a colourful parade, and enjoying a festival in Hackney Downs Park.

More than 1,000 performers from 20 carnival and community groups in the borough took part in Hackney One Carnival on 8 August.

Spectacular costumes, energetic dance and uplifting music created a party atmosphere. Performers danced their way through the streets from Queensbridge Road, past the Hackney Empire, and on to Hackney Downs Park where an afternoon festival entertained the crowds.

Carnival performers were joined on stage by many community arts organisations, with comedian Curtis Walker acting as host.

There was also a whole host of activities on offer, including a workshop to make your own carnival headdress, face painting, sports competitions, and food from across the world.

Association's carnival group. They helped to create 40 costumes from scratch in a workshop run by the Dalston-based organisation, which provides housing support and vocational training for vulnerable residents.

David said: "The day was a great success, and it was a pleasure to take part."

Stanley added: "The carnival brought everyone together in a happy and joyful moment."

The group, which received a carnival grant from the Council, used fruit topped hats and Kalsoom's model stall to represent Ridley Road Market and Hackney's links to the Indian sub-continent.

The event was organised by the Council as part of the Cultural Olympiad that celebrates arts and culture, alongside sports, in the run up to the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "It was fantastic to see thousands of residents were out enjoying Hackney One Carnival, feeling excited about our role as a host for the 2012 Games, and celebrating all the communities that make our borough so special."

Baroness Margaret Ford, Chair of the Olympic Park Legacy Company, says she's here to fulfil the legacy promises made by the Government about the London 2012 Games

By Louis High

BARONESS Margaret Ford greets me in a light, clean, modern office with views across East London, where she's responsible for driving through a sustainable legacy from the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

Ask how she feels about this momentous task and her lead role in it and her answer is simple.

She says: "I'm here to fulfil the legacy promises made by the Government that will ensure that, when the Games are over, the Olympic Park is an asset, an attraction, not only to people of the East End, and not just to London, but to the whole of the UK, and to tourists. But I really want local people to understand that the Park will not only deliver leisure, but jobs as well."

This leads me neatly to my next question: what is Baroness Ford's vision for the media centres, which are located in Hackney's part of the Olympic Park, and for Hackney Wick, which is right next door to the site? She pauses for a moment then looks me squarely in the eye.

She says:"The Wick has a great track record as a cluster of creative talent and we want to build on that, developing the media centres to offer high-quality jobs in the creative industries.

"There is absolutely no distance between the Mayor of Hackney's vision for the centres and mine. We are completely aligned. And, what's more, we will do everything in our power to realise this.

"We've spent the last nine months reviewing the London Development Agency's Legacy Masterplan, and in late September we plan to publish our response to the original consultation, which so many people took part in.

"But let me say once more, a creative village in the north west corner of the Park is a vision we are striving to realise."

So, what lessons did Baroness Ford learn when she took over the legacy of the Millennium Dome, now better known as the O2?

She says: "The longer the lead time, the better. I started working on the Dome with only a year to sort something out.

"I've come into this role with three years to deliver on the project. With this kind of lead time, we'll find the right use and operator for the buildings. I'm determined that this time next year, we will have identified those operators and those uses.

"I want to ensure that, when we take potential tenants into the Park to view the facilities, we take them outside too. I would like them all to take a walk around the Wick, it really gives you a feel for the talent and vibrancy there."

What does Baroness Ford think of Hackney in general? She says: "It's great, it reminds me a lot of my home town of Glasgow. It has many different pockets, many different cultures and different settlements. It feels old and young at the same time. And the people, well the people are friendly and straightforward, exactly like Glasgow."

And what would she like to do after the 2012 project is complete? Something completely different, if her answer is to be believed.

"I'd like to present Gardener's World. I hope the producer lives in Hackney and reads this," she says.

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I recently received one of the Council's 'No Junk Mail' packs and it's working very well. How can I get hold of one for my neighbour?

A: Hackney households receive a staggering 35million pieces of unwanted mail each year. This weighs 900 tonnes and takes 6,000 trees to make.
Letting your neighbours know how to reduce their junk mail is a fantastic way to help others and the environment.
The pack contains a Royal Mail 'opt out' card, a 'No Junk Mail' sticker for your letter box, and details of how to register online with the Mailing Preference Service, which removes addresses from up to 95 per cent of mailing lists: www.mpsonline.org.uk

Fruity free for all

A community orchard in Haggerston Park will offer fresh fruit to all-comers

By Miranda Yates

PLANTING is under way for a food forest, which residents will be able to harvest for free.

The Hackney City Farm run project is funded by the Council and being put into action by teams of volunteers, who are digging up an acre of land at Haggerston Park's easternmost point.

Fruit trees including pears, plums, apples and apricots will be planted in December.

At the foot of the trees, perennials, including raspberries, blackberries, rhubarb, currants, mint, grapes, horseradish and strawberries will be bedded in. Experts from the London Orchard Project have been advising on how to best use the land.

There are also plans to save strips of land for grains and root vegetables, and all plants will be grown without the use of chemicals.

The produce grown in the food forest will be for everyone, but Hackney City Farm is particularly keen to share it with their younger and older neighbours from Toucan Nursery and Morrell Court Residential Care Home.

Gustavo Montes de Oca, of Hackney City Farm, said: "We want people in Hackney to be able to forage for their own fruit. Nothing tastes quite like fruit that comes straight off the branches of a tree. Growing and harvesting crops helps people feel like a part of the changing landscape outdoors."

Hackney City Farm is still looking for volunteers to help prepare, plant and grow on a regular or one-off basis. The project also has funding to train up to five residents to learn about orchard management so they can help the food forest to thrive.

Sustainable food on the map

LOCAL organisation Growing Communities is running an open day and tour of its urban food growing sites on Saturday, 18 September.

The tour will give residents a chance to find out more about organic food growing in the borough, meet growers, and enjoy lunch at Stoke Newington Farmers' Market. Growing areas – including 'patchwork farm micro-sites' – will also be open to drop-in visitors from 10.30am to 4pm.

Growing Communities is a social enterprise that harnesses the collective buying power of the local community, via its organic fruit and vegetable box delivery scheme and Stoke Newington Farmers' Market, to buy and sell produce from residents who are producing food in a sustainable way.

To promote the scheme, designer Michael Georgiou has created an illustrated map that shows Growing Communities' organic gardens, pick-up points for the fruit and veg box scheme, the farmers' market, and well known borough landmarks.

The tour cost £3 per person. Places are limited and booking is required.

Keeping the waterways clean

By Sarah Menz

AN arts group is looking for enthusiastic Hackney residents to get involved in their Clean Up East London's Waterways campaign.

Focusing on the River Lee and the canals around the Olympic Park site, volunteers from the Start Performing Community Organisation (SPCO) patrol the waterways collecting discarded bottles, cans and other rubbish left in, or on, the banks of East London's waterways.

Sam Thomas, from British Waterways', said: "It's great to see community groups getting involved with the effort to tidy up the River Lee Navigation and the waterways in and around the Olympic Park."

All volunteers are welcome and will be provided with the appropriate training and safety equipment. Clean ups take place on alternate Saturdays. The next dates are 4 and 11 September.

Safe homes for the sand martins

Picture: E Cowley, The Sand Martin Trust

BRITISH Waterways has created nesting sites for an unusual visitor to the River Lee, as part of a £400,000 maintenance project.

The project, jointly funded by the Council and central Government, will see the up-grading of 150 metres of towpath and repairs to river bank walls – while leaving holes in the new brickwork to provide nesting sites for these rare birds, as well as blue tits, wrens, robins or even kingfishers.

The sand martin doesn't build a nest. Instead, it excavates holes in sandy banks, creating small, busy colonies, which means they are more likely to be found in open river areas where there is plenty of sand to burrow into. However, a pair of sand martins has set up home in Hackney this summer, using holes along the wall of the River Lee Navigation.

The rare sand martin

British Waterways' ecologist, Leela O'Dea, said: "We need to undertake some structural works on the waterway wall. We are using this as an opportunity to make sure the new wall retains some of the features that the sand martins seem to like."

Savoury skills

Wahid and Carlo tackling a monkfish tail with trainer Paula

All stories by Marcel Reinard

FILLETING a fish following tips from a professional was just one of the ways some Hackney teenagers sampled activities to encourage their return to full-time education.

Young people who may have been excluded or unable to secure a place at a mainstream school have spent the summer trying out everything from making cheese at the Community Kitchen in Hoxton to recording hip hop lyrics.

Devante Knight, 16, was one of the young people who had a go at boning fish under the watchful eye of a Billingsgate Seafood Training School tutor.

"I do cook a bit at home but not fish. My best dish is a kind of raisin cake," he said, while preparing a chilli and ginger marinade for some monkfish kebabs.

The students and tutors later barbecued the results of their efforts.

The programme is funded by the New Visions Pupil Referral Unit (PRU) and delivered by Inspire!, the borough's Education Business Partnership.

Dorothy Hodgson, Programme Officer at Inspire!, said: "Many of these students will have college places lined up for the autumn, and the aim of this programme is to keep them motivated to return to education in the new academic year by providing a range of enjoyable activities and opportunities that would not normally be available to them."

Money matters and muck

SIX A-level students from Hackney Community College have been reflecting on a summer in the City – with a bit of time down on the farm thrown in for good measure.

Based mainly in the Square Mile, Joseph Adeniji, Aadil Ahmed, Sneh Brahmbhatt, John Connolly, Anthony Osei-Lawrence and Tiffany Thomas spent four weeks working with investment bank UBS for the Hackney Summer Internship Programme. The group attended workshops and tested their skills in areas from debating competitions to organising a social responsibility day that saw UBS employees fertilising fields, clearing nettles, rubbish and rubble, and painting benches at Hackney City Farm. Aadil said: "This internship has been a really great experience for me. I have learnt so much about banking as well as other skills such as using my own initiative, taking on responsibility and being independent."

The programme, a joint initiative between HCC and UBS, gives A level students the chance to enhance their skills through work experience and business and finance in-job training.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The Beijing delegation

'People smile and say hello'

TEACHERS and managers from the Beijing School of Economics and Management have compared notes with staff at Hackney College (HCC).

This summer, the Shoreditch college hosted the Chinese business school's three-week visit to London, with the stopover mainly focusing on management and student support systems.

HCC said the group was also interested in the differences between their native Haidan district in Beijing, and the diversity in this borough, with one visitor commenting that in Hackney 'people smile and say hello with everybody'.

The relationship between the two institutes began when HCC Principal Ian Ashman led a project for the two Olympic and Paralympic host cities to learn from each other to make sure local students and communities benefit from hosting the Games.

Students and staff at the mental health centre

Learning on the job

TEENAGERS keen on a career in mental health or medicine spent a week's work experience with mother and baby health professionals at the City and Hackney Centre of Mental Health.

The four met with midwives, clinical nurse specialists and psychotherapists, observed patient referrals, toured wards and went on visits with the home treatment team.

Students Roseanne Morris, Anna Sanghera, Lydia Thangarajah and Raveena Bhondi were all eager to get real-life experience: Roseanne in cardiovascular surgery; Anna in Psychiatry; Raveena in becoming a GP; and Lydia in People Sciences.

Roseanne said: "The week has had a really positive reaction on all of us. Especially me, as before this week, I wasn't sure whether I really wanted to study or work in the medical sector, but this week has been so good that now I'm determined to pursue this. I think it's really solidified in all of us the idea of pursuing our respective careers."

REVIEW

THE crop of paintings created by James Petrucci is the product of his time in a Malawian orphanage.

He took photos to reflect the social conditions the children face before committing images to canvas. Expressiveness is clear on the faces of his subjects, aided by his artistic style of thick paint layering and seemingly uninhibited brush strokes.

"The children in these paintings are among the lucky few," he said, adding that the home is 'run by an overworked couple from Canada and the US on a shoestring budget and their prayers'. Hugely over-crowded and still growing, each child still gets an education, food, shelter and the loving family that they desperately need, he added.

It's easy to default to stereotype when we think of orphaned children in some parts of Africa, the result of decades of aid campaigns and news images revealing the difficulties on the continent.

What has become troubling in recent years is the desensitisation many of us can have, a malaise brought from watching repeated imagery of problems overseas. Yet the artist brings together a work that feels intimate, and one that highlights children as individuals rather than a collective unifying plight.

Nevertheless, he said, the aim was not to moralise the subjects but to allow each viewer to draw their own conclusions to address their preconceptions of the often marginalised and undervalued.

PREVIEW London International Animation Film Festival

By Marcel Reinard

London International Animation Film Festival, until 5 September. Various locations including Rio Cinema, Kingsland High Street, E8, on 4 September

RIO Cinema is to stage the Hackney leg of the London International Animation Festival (LIAF), the annual platform for newcomers and stalwarts from the animation film industry.

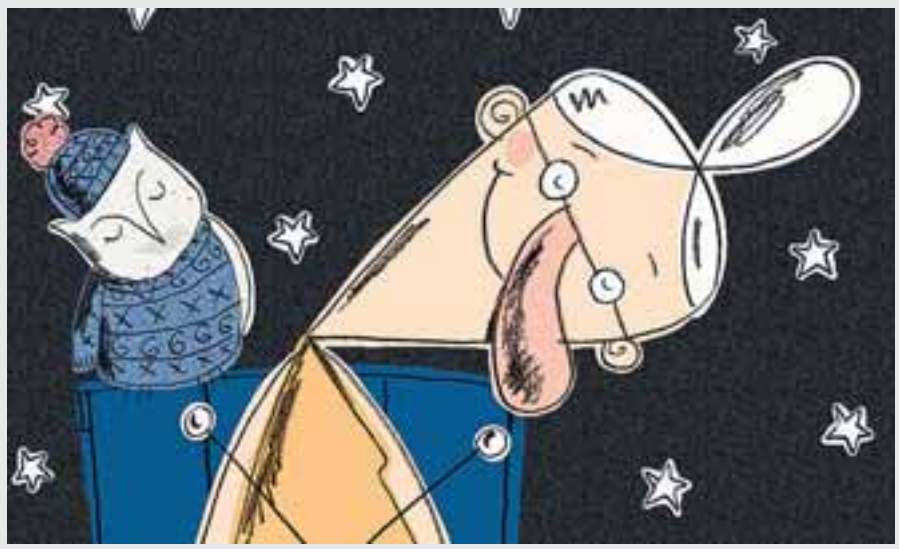

Now in its seventh year, the event lines up recent productions, archived material from around the world and talks from some of its creators.

It is hoped that the roster will inspire audiences with the technical and visual diversity of the films on offer.

And the differences in style really can be huge from one film to another: compare the stop-motion animation of Joseph's Snails (playing at Rio) to computer generated blockbuster Toy Story 3, despite both falling under the same wide genre.

Culture writers may look back at these years as its second landmark age. Quality output has been around for decades, but older audiences really only became switched on since Pixar and TV shows like The Simpsons consistently blurred kids' and grown ups' entertainment.

Even the language changed, 'cartoon' has been replaced by the more cerebral 'animated feature', showing just how much the rest of the arts has finally embraced the medium. All the better for it, I say.

Competition

Five Guys Named Moe

WIN!! Theatre tickets

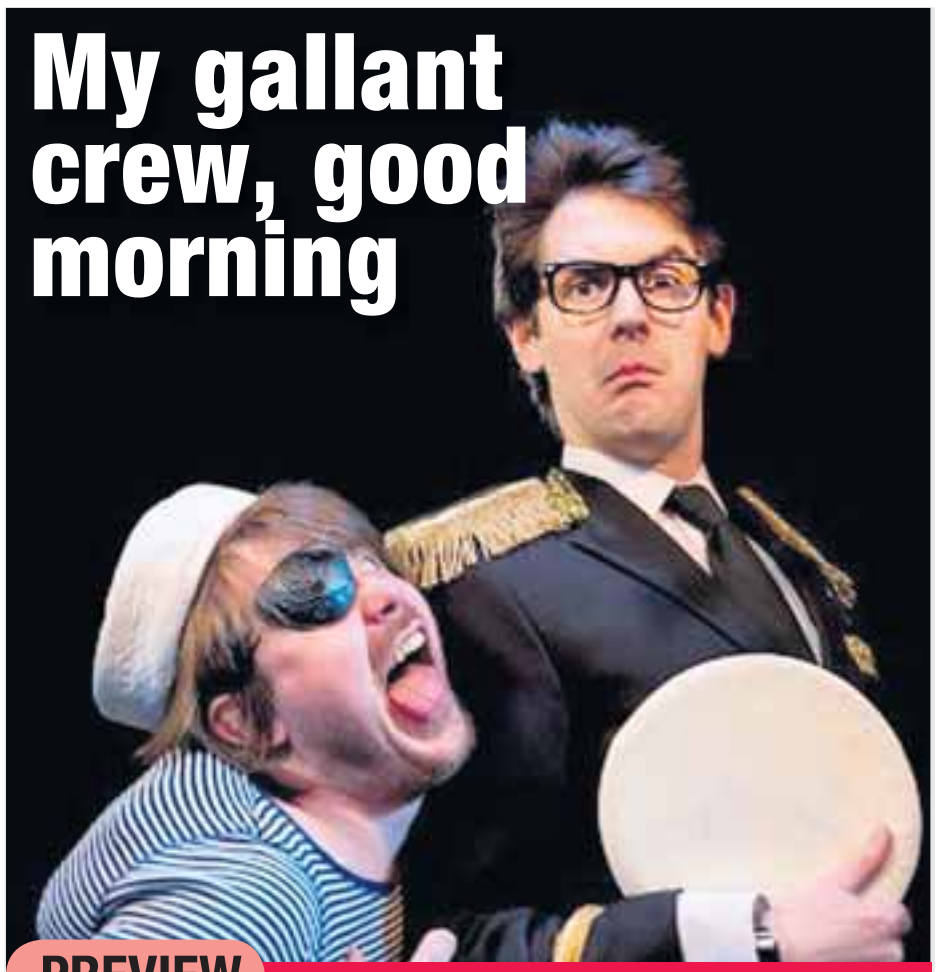

Five Guys Named Moe gets a star draw for its Stratford East homecoming performance – Clarke Peters, now famously known as Lester Freamon in The Wire.
Twenty years after the show was staged for the first time, Clarke, the book's writer, returns to the role he played in Stratford in 1990 as down-on-his-luck Nomax.
Nomax may have lost his girlfriend and his money, with help from his 1930s radio he and the cast belt out jazz classics including 'Early In The Morning', 'Choo, Choo, Ch'Boogie' and 'Saturday Night Fish Fry'. The six-piece band, dance routines, music written by Louis Jordan and pitch-perfect harmonies combine to get him back on track. Already a West End and Broadway hit from the 1990s, Five Guys Named Moe's new production's performance at Edinburgh Fringe 2010 was highly lauded and runs at Stratford East, E15, between 4 September and 2 October.

For a chance to win a pair of tickets, send a postcard to Five Guys Named Moe Competition, Hackney Today, Communications, Room 82, Hackney Town Hall, Mare Street E8 1EA; or e-mail: htnews@hackney.gov.uk by 12pm on 31 August. Tickets are for 4, 6 and 8 September. Submissions must include an address and contact number. Winners will be pulled out of a hat.

PREVIEW Incompetence at sea is the order of the day

By Marcel Reinard

HMS Pinafore, 1-19 September, Rosemary Branch Theatre, Shepperton Road, N1

HMS Pinafore, Gilbert & Sullivan's send-up of class and the navy, opens this September at the Rosemary Branch Theatre.

With a cast of nine, Charles Court Opera's (CCO) show offers a fast and witty reproduction of the tale of incompetence at sea, gently lampooning social structures and patriotism in the process.

Captain's daughter Josephine is in love with a lower class sailor, but her father has already promised her to another, 'more suitable' lord. At first she follows her father's wishes, but her husband-to-be's belief in equality encourages Josephine to overturn social order. However, like many of the Gilbert & Sullivan's comic operas, there is a twist near the end of the story.

Following good reviews of its Dick Whittington and accompanied by artists from leading recital venue Wigmore Hall, the young company return to the Islington theatre.

To date, CCO has staged more than 20 works by Gilbert & Sullivan, Mozart, Rimsky-Korsakov, Ligeti, Schoenberg, Maxwell, Davies, Strauss, Schumann, Britten and Beckett, as well as interpretations of traditional pantomime and regular concerts in the UK and overseas.

It prides itself on its commitment to collaborating with young performers from the widest variety of performance backgrounds, be it opera singers embarking on their careers, music theatre specialists, instrumentalists or breakbeat artists.

For this show, expect the usual levels of absurdity from the original Victorian opera that ridicules those who rise to the top but remain completely out of their depth.

When YHWorld met Akala

Akala at the Brady Arts Centre off Brick Lane

By Siana Banguras, 18

MY next mission of 2010 was to head down to the Brady Arts Centre in East London, just off Brick Lane, to meet the British underground hip-hop and rap sensation, Akala.

After settling in we got to chatting about everything from influences for his latest album 'Double Think', to being the younger brother of Ms Dynamite, and a friend of Ashley Cole – a result of his days as a trainee professional footballer.

As if that wasn't enough, he told us a little about his time at the Royal Institute as a young mathematical genius, where he began a physics A-level at just age 13.

> Akala believes that each person has something unique to share

It's funny to think of passion kind of 'flowing' from a person, but as I sat there and listened to him describe how he felt about things like politics, youth culture and even the World Cup, I could feel his emotions and ideas fill the room.

Akala believes that each person has something unique to share with the world and that no man should look in the mirror and find an enemy. I'm glad to see that not every rapper wants to hit us with sex, violence and bling.

In any case, go and get your copy of his latest album, check out my interview with him on the YHWorld site and go and listen to him on MySpace.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Are they really bad for you?

WITHOUT a doubt, crime among young people today is an issue that needs tackling.

A news report on a violent crime might not even make the front page anymore.It's only natural for society to look for someone or something to blame.

Some point the finger at violent video games, music, or films for poisoning the innocent minds of the youth. Could they be right? Is there a link between the things teenagers do for fun, and anti-social behaviour on the streets?

Does playing Grand Theft Auto or Red Dead Redemption mean you're no longer affected by the sight of violence? Does a film such as Shank make you think gang feuds are acceptable? Maybe you think grime music condones violence among young people.

We want to know what you think causes violence – and how we can stop it. Have your say at: www.yhworld.wordpress.com

THIS page has been compiled by staff and volunteers at YH World – a social enterprise which produces a website full of info about events, courses, and general happenings in Hackney. They aim to make sure young people don't miss out – and most of the stuff they include is free to take part in. They are always looking for young journalists and undercover reporters. 300 new books

Staff from Homerton hospital, Hackney Council and the hospital's branch of WHSmith get together for the hand over of the new books

By Gareth Greene

THE Community Library Service at Homerton hospital has been given a 300-book boost from the WHSmith Charitable Trust.

The Council-run library, will add the books to its existing stock and make them immediately available to patients.

The service has issued over 70,000 items in the past year across the borough and provides weekly book deliveries to patients around the hospital.

Charlie Sheldon, Chief Nurse and Director of Governance at Homerton hospital, said: "We are delighted that WHSmith has chosen us to make this donation. It is a fantastic initiative and one that will be used and enjoyed by many patients."

The trust is an independent charity that aims to promote literacy and support the local communities in which WHSmith staff and customers live and work.

Its 'Books For Hospitals' initiative will see 3,000 books donated to ten hospitals across the country this summer.

Kim Wright, the Council's Corporate Director of Community Services, said: "Hackney Library Service welcomes this opportunity to work alongside Homerton hospital and WHSmith as part of the Books For Hospitals national initiative.

> "It is a fantastic initiative and one will be used and enjoyed by many patients"

"We were very pleased to be invited to be part of this scheme, which will build on our already popular service and benefit patients and their families in so many ways."

'Good' scores for Homerton hospital

HOMERTON has done well in the latest assessment of its environment, food and privacy and dignity for patients.

The hospital was ranked 'good' for environment, and standards of privacy and dignity, according to the Patient Environment Action Team (PEAT) inspection 2010. It also received an 'acceptable' score for food quality.

Charlie Sheldon, Chief Nurse at the hospital, said: "As with previous years we have been most gratified at the comments received by patients during the inspection visit.

"Inevitably there were some issues identified which will be addressed going forward, particularly around quality of food.

"We will also be ensuring that the very positive comments from patients will be fed back to the appropriate teams.

"The comments will also help shape our patient experience strategy as we continue to seek new ways to improve services."

PEAT inspection teams are made up of matrons, nurses, doctors, catering and domestic staff and specialists, who assess the overall cleanliness of hospitals, and the quality of food for staff and patients. Scores awarded range from 1 (unacceptable) to 5 (excellent).

NEWS IN BRIEF

Previous winners of the awards celebrate

Who's making a difference?

LOCAL heroes making an impact on the many communities in Hackney are to be honoured in an upcoming event.

Hackney Council for Voluntary Service (HCVS) has opened nominations for the Adiaha Antigha Community Achievement Awards, which recognise individuals and groups that positively affect people's lives.

The awards are in memory of Adiaha Antigha, a former director of HCVS who made a huge contribution to the organisation and to the third sector as a whole.

This year, the awards cover six categories including a new one for 'an organisation that has been the most enterprising in adapting to current challenges'.

Anyone can make a nomination, and an organisation can also nominate itself.

The closing date is 31 August, with the award ceremony taking place at HCVS's Hackney Futures Fair on 7 September. For further details visit: www.hcvs.org.uk

Stay in the loop

A NETWORK to help people manage long-term health conditions has been launched in Hackney.

The Patient Network will allow residents who have attended courses in how to self-manage their condition to stay in touch. Members will be able to use a new online forum to help each other set goals and mark achievements. They can also keep in contact via e-mail and monthly meetings.

The project is funded by NHS City and Hackney and managed by local charity Social Action for Health (SAfH).

Jane Winder, Chair of NHS City and Hackney, said: "It is crucial people understand that they don't have to live in isolation with a chronic illness.

"People can lead a healthier life and they do this best when they are led and inspired by people who have experience of chronic illnesses themselves."

Anyone who is over 18 and living with – or caring for someone with – a long-term condition, such as asthma, diabetes or depression, can take part.

Susie Crome, from SAfH, added: "It means people who have learned and developed their self management skills can continue to support each other in managing their long-term health conditions."

In the round

Clockwise from above: interior view showing organ and pulpit, 1910; front cover of commemorative booklet to mark the church's centenary in 1904; view of church from Lower Clapton Road in 1972; young people performing in the Round Chapel this year as part of the 'It Happened Here' project co-ordinated by Hoxton Hall; lithograph, c1880

By Elizabeth Green, Archives Access & Outreach Officer

THE unusual shape and design of the Round Chapel is striking as you walk along Lower Clapton Road. Inside it is even more impressive.

The original congregation first established a church in 1804. It was a breakaway from Ram's Chapel, formed when Stephen Ram built a private space to worship for his family and friends on a piece of land in Homerton.

As Protestant Christian 'nonconformists' they refused to follow the governance of the Church of England. Nonconformist, sometimes known as 'free' churches included Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Baptists, Quakers, Methodists, Unitarians and members of the Salvation Army. Hackney had a high proportion of nonconformist churches.

The Ram's Chapel breakaway group met in rooms at the Homerton theological college for dissenters. John Pye-Smith, who was resident tutor at the college, became the first minister of this Congregationalist church. Numbers grew and in 1810, the Old Gravel Pit meeting house, off Morning Lane, was leased.

Between 1841 and 1871, the population of Hackney rose from 38,000 to 115,000, and the church congregation enlarged with it. By the 1860s, the Old Gravel Pit meeting house was no longer large enough.

In March 1868, after a group of church members had privately acquired land in Lower Clapton, a committee was formed to supervise the building of a new church.

On 11 February 1869, the plans of architect Henry Fuller were approved and an appeal for funds was made. The last public service was held at the Old Gravel Pit Chapel on 23 April 1871, and the inaugural service at the new Round Chapel on 26 April 1871. The final cost of the building was £21,294.

Between the 1880s and the 1920s, the church flourished. In 1886, average daily attendance was 1,504 and in 1902 it was 1,495. The centenary of the church was celebrated in 1904.

The church also began a range of other activities. Young Men's Meetings encouraged local lay preachers to evangelise in poor districts. A minister's house or 'manse' was bought, and a scout group established. Membership of the church rose to 700 in 1926, but after that began a steady decline.

In 1972, there was a merger between the Presbyterian Church of England and the Congregational Church of England and Wales.

This resulted in the formation of the United Reform Church and the chapel became the Clapton Park United Reform Church.

But by the 1980s, the church was too large for the congregation. The building was also in serious need of repair. Discussions were held between the United Reform Church, English Heritage and the Hackney Historic Buildings Trust (HHBT), a charity responsible for the protection and conservation of a range of buildings in the borough.

In 1991, the United Reform Church handed over the Round Chapel and ancillary buildings to HHBT, which, with the help of English Heritage, repaired the buildings, which are now run as a community and arts centre.

The Clapton Park United Reform Church now operates from the old schoolroom buildings facing Powerscroft Road.

Hackney Council is committed to improving services, increasing opportunities for all, and making a safer, cleaner, greener borough. Here we focus on a service that helps to make this possible:

UNDER THE MAGNIFYING GLASS

Gareth Wall, Head of Overview and Scrutiny

Joining the Council two years ago from the Centre for Public Scrutiny, Gareth is passionate about the difference Overview and Scrutiny can make.

Far from being a 'dry' job, Gareth says that a key element of his role is being creative – finding new and innovative ways to help councillors find out information and engage with people. His team works with a range of other organisations, for example the Hackney Youth Parliament, to make sure that as well as using information such as statistics and presentations, they use first-hand knowledge to make recommendations.

He says the first review he worked on in Hackney, looking at services for under fives, demonstrated this: "We visited lots of children's centres with councillors and talked to the people who were using them.

"As well as offering day care for children, these centres provide a range of advice services to parents, but a lot of them felt they would like to be able to access housing advice. This recommendation was taken forward and families can now access housing advice at many centres."

Looking closer

By Siobhan Silbert

THE Overview and Scrutiny service is responsible for looking at how the Council and its partner organisations could improve the services they deliver for residents.

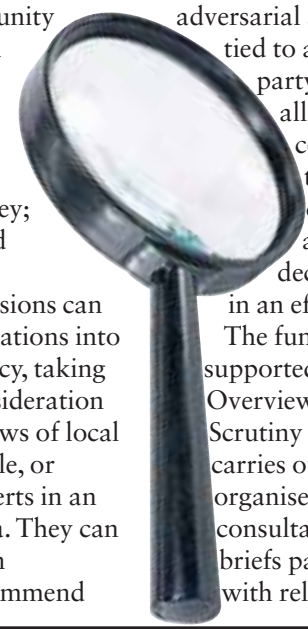

The councillor-led function is made up of an Overview and Scrutiny Board and five Scrutiny Commissions which examine: community safety and social inclusion; governance and resources; living in Hackney; health in Hackney; and children and young people.

These commissions can conduct investigations into areas of policy, taking into consideration the views of local people, or experts in an area. They can then recommend changes if they think there are better ways of doing things.

Scrutiny is non-adversarial and is not tied to any political party, which allows commissions to both challenge and advise local decision-makers in an effective way.

The function is supported by the Overview and Scrutiny team, which carries out research, organises consultation, and briefs panel members with relevant information. This year, there will be a range of reviews covering topics as diverse as digital inclusion; responding to gang violence; services for disabled children and young people; budget reductions and the Council's libraries strategy.

The team would love to hear from residents who would like to be involved.

Scrutiny commissions are responsible for ensuring the Council is doing its job

Could the winning film feature some of the 14 cycle hire docking points in Hackney, or show how cycling has grown in popularity?

Bikes in the frame

All stories by
Marcel Reinard

FILMMAKERS are invited to capture London's cycling revolution by creating short films that could be screened in the capital and across the world.

In conjunction with Film London and the Bicycle Film Festival (BFF), Transport for London (TfL) has launched a competition to celebrate the large-scale take up of bikes in the capital, plus the launch of the Barclays Cycle Hire scheme, and the London-wide network of Cycle Superhighways.

Entrants are asked to submit three-minute films in documentary, drama or animation form that capture the spirit of London cycling.

The best will be screened at the BFF in October and submitted for inclusion in the 2011 BFF programme – shown in 39 countries.

Winners will also receive a cash prize provided by cycling brand Bspoke and designer cycling apparel and accessories. Competitors have until 6 September to enter.

'Cause yellow lines fade away

HACKNEY'S parking services team are currently refreshing road markings in the east of the borough, where the old paint has become worn or faint.

Faded lines can make it difficult for motorists and pedestrians to see junctions and passing points.

The team will be working on the roads for the rest August and throughout September, but will only be painting back lines that are already on the roads – not adding new ones.

The council is refreshing road markings in the east of the borough

While work goes on, residents are asked to make sure they keep all yellow lines clear in New River, Springfield, Cazenove, Lordship, Hackney Downs, Leabridge and Kings Park wards. This will ensure the work is completed quickly and safely and disruption is kept to a minimum.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Treat your bike to a free health check

Pit stop for tip-top bikes

CYCLISTS are invited to a free event where they can bring their bikes along for a health check.

Cycling is an increasingly popular method of transport in Hackney, not only for its health benefits, but because it's also faster and cheaper than many other options. In fact, the borough now has the highest level of cycling among residents in London.

The Council's Streetscene Team will be holding one of its regular Cycle Pit Stop events on 26 August, from 3pm to 7pm, at Butterfield Green, N16.Cyclists can get a free bike check-up, plus practical support and information to help them get around the borough by bike.

Fresh air goes underground

THE first air-conditioned London Underground train is now in service. It currently travels along the Metropolitan line carrying passengers between Wembley Park and Watford. It is the first of a 191 strong new S-Stock fleet that will eventually serve 40 per cent of the Tube network.

Further trains will be introduced on to the Metropolitan line, with roll out completed by 2011; Circle and Hammersmith & City lines by 2012; District line by 2013; and all remaining lines by 2015.

Peter Hendy, Transport for London Commissioner, said customers' journeys will be cooler, with the new trains being more accessible and spacious and boasting the latest CCTV in each carriage.

The new air-conditioned Tube train

Hackney is a fast improving Council, serving one of the UK's most diverse populations. Regeneration is improving housing, public services and transport links. Crime is falling. Exam results are up. The 2012 Games are coming...

Job vacancies

Neighbourhoods & Regeneration

Senior/Principal Commercial Standards Officer

£31,152 - £40,506
Apply by: 24 September

Providing a comprehensive enforcement resource, you'll play a leading role in enforcing trading standards legislation.
You'll lead on key projects for the service and give expert enforcement advice to consumers and businesses.
You will undertake inspections, investigate complaints, prepare prosecution reports, undertake DVD counterfeit operations and instigate test purchases.
In addition, you may be called as a local authority witness in court and to write letters and reports of a complex nature recommending changes in policy and procedure.
You'll be adept at using your initiative to develop project and policy work in key areas and your knowledge will include a detailed understanding of staff training, development and performance.
It's essential that you have either a Diploma in Trading Standards, Diploma in Consumer Affairs (Part 1 and 2), or Diploma in Consumer Affairs and Trading Standards and proven experience in investigation, enforcement and education.

Customer & Corporate Services

Senior Telecoms Officer

£35,055 - £37,851
Apply by: 31 August

You will assist the Telecoms Manager in the development, delivery and support of high quality telecoms services to the Council. A key feature of this role will be ensuring that calls to the Telecoms Service Desk are handled efficiently and professionally.
Your good knowledge of TDM and IP telephony (Aastra MXOne), and Solidus call handling software will be matched by the ability to understand complex technical issues and their business and operational impact. A flair for communicating and presenting information in a structured and audience-appropriate way is vital.
Your service desk responsibilities will include answering, logging and resolving issues from customers, ensuring that procedures are followed and service level agreements are achieved.
You will also develop and maintain systems, using the information gained to make decisions and set priorities.
It's essential that you are enthusiastic about acquiring new skills and knowledge and that you are committed to personal development.
You'll be skilled in planning, prioritising and organising workloads to achieve both corporate objectives and meet customer needs.

Job Profile
Murthy Balakrishnan

Trading Standards Manager, talks to Hackney Today about the Senior/Principal Commercial Standards Officer role

Why is the Trading Standards Team a good place to work?
The work we do is not only varied and interesting, but it is also incredibly rewarding. Everyone feels annoyed when they hear about people being ripped off, and we can practically help residents. The team is tight-knit, highly motivated and professional, and everyone is really supportive. We all have our own areas of expertise and all officers are given the opportunity to explore and research their area.
What makes this a rewarding job?
It's really satisfying to empower residents to make informed purchasing decisions in a borough that has such a diverse population. The service puts out warnings and pre-shopping advice and reacts very quickly to issues. It's also rewarding to give high-quality trader advice to small businesses in the borough. Feedback has been very positive. The job can be exciting, but it also has a problem-solving side that is really satisfying.
What are the main challenges?
One of the key challenges is meeting the needs of hard to reach communities in Hackney who may have concerns, but don't know who to contact for help. We also need to come up with new ways to use the resources that we have effectively, and balance nationally-driven projects and policies with local needs.
What attributes will the successful candidate have?
They will need to be very resourceful, a good team player and someone who can demonstrate that they are both innovative and practical, with excellent problem solving skills.
They should have experience in most areas of Trading Standards work and be adept at managing a challenging workload. They'll need to be flexible and work unsociable hours on occasions.

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years.

The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilites, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

Please note that some councillors do not hold surgeries in August. To check surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm
